Settlements of accounts will be required monthly, or quarterly, and will be discontinued. The daily and weekly issues will be furnished at the lowest cash rates, and no exception will in future be made to this rule.

The Alabama claims appear as far from settlement as ever; and, as we predicted a few weeks ago, the international knot will be handed over to the Grant administration to untie. The American Minister, Mr. Reverdy Johnson—who seems throughout to have been actuated by a sincere desire to bring about a proper understanding between the two governments upon all questions in dispute,—has signally failed. The protocol of the treaty to which he was a contracting party meets with the disapprobation of his country; and the Senate of the United States has withheld, or will withhold, its approval of the basis of agreement. In the pacific utterances of Mr. Johnson the world has ample assurance that President Johnson and Mr. Seward are anxious to close the debt and creditor account of the civil war, and hand the Government over to their successors with every account balanced. That they have failed to do so, has been no fault of either Lord Stanley or Lord Clarendon. Every concession that could in honor be made was granted by the British Ministry. A first protocol was unsatisfactory to the American Government. It was amended to meet their views. The second protocol is spurned by the Senate, which threatens to impeach the American Minister, and would undoubtedly do so but for the fact that his term of service is drawing rapidly to a close. By the terms of the protocol each Government is to appoint two commissioners who shall agree upon a fifth as an umpire. If the commissioners fail to agree the arbitrator decides the claim, unless two of the commissioners desire that the head of some friendly Government shall act as arbitrator, in which case it is wholly withdrawn from the operation of the commission and the two Governments must select such friendly sovereign, or if they do not the claim is barred. Such is the gist of the protocol, and to an unprejudiced mind what could be fairer than a proposition to settle by arbitration the disagreement? But the Americans decline to submit the whole question of claims against both Governments by the citizens of each to arbitration. They decline to acknowledge that British subjects have any claims against the American Government that can be produced as offsets to the Alabama claims. They say, 'We are the claimants. We alone are the aggrieved parties. Instead of our bill being merely for the vessels destroyed by the English pirates, amounting to only ten or twenty millions of dollars, it should be for the value of the entire commerce which these privateers swept from the seas. If England pays merely for the vessels actually destroyed and retains the vast profits she has secured by driving all freights into British bottoms, grasping all our navigation and retaining it up to the present time, she comes out of the entire affair with a net profit of hundreds of millions of dollars.' The reader can easily perceive whither such a line of argument if carried into practice must inevitably lead. Great Britain would be held responsible, not alone for the actual damage inflicted by the Confederate cruisers that escaped from her ports, but for the entire expense to which the United States was put in prosecuting the war on land and sea after Great Britain had recognized the belligerent rights of the Southern Confederacy. This seems very much like the bargain which the white hunter proposed to the red-man. "Now shall I take the turkey while you take the crow, or will you take the crow while I take the turkey?" It is difficult—impossible—to predict what will be Grant's line of policy on this important matter; or, indeed, on any other. He has never yet declared his policy or his principles, and even the political party whose eagles he carried to victory in the late contest, are beginning to think that they have caught a Tartar in the man who in desperation they selected as their standard-bearer without knowing aught of his political convictions. It is so Grant that the destinies of the Republic will be entrusted for the next few years; and he will soon be called on to decide whether, in the further discussion of the Alabama claims, the demands of his Government will be of so preposterous a character that the sword alone can arbitrate; or whether he is disposed to leave the question for settlement in the hands of the best men of both countries.

The Proposed Road to Kootenay—Letter from A. C. Anderson, Esq.

EDITOR BRITISH COLONIST:—As far back as 1852, while actively engaged in the affairs of the Hudson Bay Company, I contemplated the establishment of a route of communication between the head of the Great Okanagan Lake and the Upper Arrow Lake of the Columbia, thence through a pass from the head of this last lake (since called by the Government explorers "Trout River Pass") to the valley of the Kootenay at the Flat-bow Lake; thus to reach the fair navigation of the upper waters, while avoiding the dangerous portion comprised between the discharge of the Flat-bow Lake and the mouth of the river. The objects in view were: 1st, to isolate, in connection with the depot at Fort Langley on Fraser River, the whole of the valuable trade within the British boundary; and, 2nd, to avoid the payment, upon the goods intended for that portion of the trade, the heavy impost laid upon our importations to Fort Colville, which you are aware is within the United States line, and which was then the centre of the Company's business in that direction. I despatched, in the summer of 1852, an officer to explore the first portion of the route, whose report was favorable to the views I entertained; but from divers causes the completion of the scheme was interrupted.

Since then new and enlarged interests have arisen and the necessity of a line of communication, generally similar in its features to that which I had contemplated, becomes constantly more apparent. The exploration of the Eagle Pass, as officially reported, shows that a route to the Columbia far more advantageous than that originally proposed, might be rendered available at very trivial expense, so as to open the trade of the Upper Columbia and the Kootenay country to the enterprise of our merchants. I noticed in your columns that the desirability of this measure is now being publicly agitated. I have no longer any connection with commercial enterprise, nor have I, in advocating this measure, any personal end to subserve; but in the face of evidence, and viewing the restless competition with which our merchants have to contend, I cannot but express my regret that an object so important should so long have been neglected.

I need not apologise for intruding on your columns with these remarks upon a subject in connexion with which my name has already more than once appeared. I make them, however, with reference to this as a line of communication between the extremes of the Southern portions of the Colony, for local and commercial purposes solely. Its consideration for the purposes of a future railway to Canada—a consummation removed, I fear, for another generation to witness—I regard as nugatory, seeing that a shorter, and in all respects preferable, line of transit is known to exist.

A Remarkable Narrative.—Terrible Scenes on Shipboard.

The London Telegraph says: "Fiction and fact are equally outdone by the almost incredible narrative related in the log of the Dutch vessel Finneebina, which has just arrived in Cork harbor from South America. It seems that a London sailor, Rogers by name, shipped on board the Finneebina at Buenos Ayres as a foremast hand upon her voyage to Cork. Captain Hotz, the Hollander in command, had in his cabin a large sum of money; the fact was well known, and Rogers appears to have determined to obtain it by a violent and desperate means. On the fourth day out from Buenos Ayres, when five of these seven men were on deck, Rogers put his astonishing villainy into execution. The first mate was standing in the open gangway when Rogers, with a sudden thrust, pushed the poor fellow into the sea. The cook, hearing the cries of the drowning man, and most likely thinking that he had got into the water by accident, ran to the taffrail with a rope to throw to the mate; and while he was leaning over, Rogers took him by the legs and pitched him also into the water.

The second mate, who came running aft in order to help, was encountered by the miscreant, who had meantime got hold of an axe, and brandished it furiously. The armed Dutchman treated before the murderous wretch, and jumped down the companion, just as the commander, alarmed by the outcry, was hurrying upon deck. The two men came into collision and fell; and while Capt Hotz and his second mate were rolling upon the cabin floor together, Rogers clapped down the hatch over the ladder and put the trio into the stowage. Thus there were three of ship's company imprisoned below, and two men only remained on deck, an American and an Irishman. The assassin stood amidst the two, and swore that he would kill them with an axe if either disobeyed him in the least particular. He ordered the one to keep forward, and the other aft, and made them see the vessel by turns; directing his course, as he supposed, back to a desert part of the Brazilian coast.

His idea seems to have been to run the ship ashore and find some way of killing the survivors. But the compasses were wrong; and thus, instead of making the land, the captured ship, in the possession of the homicidal maniac, was all the while steering parallel to the coast line. Twice during this time, the captain got a shot at Rogers through the gratings, but without wounding him seriously. Four days and nights the desperate creature stood, axe in hand, overhauling the two sailors on deck, himself master of the vessel; and he is said never to have closed his eyes, keeping a wild beast's watch of fear, rage and avarice. It appears rather strange that nothing could be done by the two men together. Did they dare to sleep? Had they any food and water, or was the lonely pirate thus provided? Perhaps it was his plan to starve them to death at the helm, or to weaken them till they could be easily killed.

For him, at any rate, there was no relief, no respite from his desperate sentinels; and at the end of the fourth day nature gave him over into the hands of his intended victims. The villain fell suddenly asleep as he crouched, watching the Yankee and the shaman, beyond the range of the captain's stow. The long awaited opportunity was ergerly embraced; the Irishman sprang suddenly forward, and seizing the axe, with one blow all but severed the head of Rogers from his body. The hatchways were opened, and the three prisoners were let free. The head of the vessel was then turned towards Rio Janeiro, where a full statement was made of the deplorable adventure; and after due investigation, the Finneebina shipped a fresh crew, and came quietly across to Cork Harbor, where the survivors of the tragedy have told their extraordinary narrative."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—These celebrated Pills are essentially useful in purifying the blood, cleansing the stomach, gently stimulating the kidneys, and acting as mild aperients. A few doses of this purifying medicine set the foulest stomach right, remove all bilious symptoms, steady the circulation, give strength to the muscles and composure to the brain and nerves. The Pills are so innocuous that they may be taken by persons in the most delicate state of health, and with marvellous effect. When the system has been enervated by over-indulgence or exhausted by mercurial preparation, these Pills are excellent restoratives, they expel the poison and enrich the blood.
